Arthritis can turn simple daily tasks — opening jars, buttoning shirts, typing — into painful challenges. Fortunately, a growing range of clever aids and gadgets can restore independence and reduce joint strain.

Kitchen Aids

Jar and bottle openers: The Kuhn Rikon Swiss opener (£8–12) grips lids of any size. Electric jar openers remove the need for grip strength entirely.

Ergonomic cutlery: Brands like Knork and Good Grips feature thick, cushioned handles that reduce the force needed to grip. Weighted cutlery can help with tremors too.

Kettle tippers: A cradle that tilts the kettle for you, avoiding the need to lift a heavy, boiling kettle. Available from disability retailers (£15–25).

Tap turners: Lever-style attachments fit over standard taps, converting a twist into a push — much easier for arthritic hands.

One-touch can openers: Electric can openers that require a single button press. The Hamilton Beach Smooth Touch (£20) is a popular choice.

Personal Care

Button hooks and zip pulls: Small tools that loop through buttonholes or zipper tabs, enabling dressing with minimal finger dexterity.

Long-handled shoe horns: Avoid bending to put on shoes — essential for hip and knee arthritis.

Electric toothbrushes: Require less grip and movement than manual brushing. The Oral-B iO Series is gentle on hands.

Pump-style soap and shampoo: Eliminates the need to grip and squeeze bottles.

Technology

Ergonomic keyboards: Split keyboards like the Microsoft Sculpt reduce wrist strain. Angled designs keep hands in a more natural position.

Voice assistants: Amazon Echo and Google Home let you control lights, heating, timers, and shopping lists by voice — reducing the need for manual switches.

Touchscreen styluses: A chunky stylus is easier to grip than tapping with painful fingers. The Meko Universal Stylus (£8) works on all smartphones and tablets.

Dragon NaturallySpeaking: Voice recognition software that types as you speak — invaluable for those with hand arthritis who need to work at a computer.

Mobility Aids

Walking stick ferrules: The Flexyfoot ferrule provides better grip and shock absorption than standard rubber tips.

Reaching aids: Extend your reach without bending or stretching. Useful for high shelves, picking up dropped items, or garden tasks.

Perching stools: Allow you to "sit" at kitchen worktop height while preparing food — reducing hip and knee load.

Where to Buy in the UK

- NRS Healthcare: Extensive range of daily living aids
- Ability Superstore: Online retailer specialising in disability aids
- Amazon: Wide range with user reviews
- Your local Occupational Therapy service: Can assess your needs and provide some aids free through the NHS. Ask your GP for a referral.

Financial Support

Some aids may be available free or subsidised: - NHS OT referral: Occupational therapists can prescribe certain aids on the NHS - Disabled Facilities Grant: Covers home adaptations up to £30,000 in England - VAT exemption: Many disability aids are VAT-free — look for "VAT relief" on product pages

Key Takeaway

The right gadgets and aids aren't about giving in to arthritis — they're about working smarter, protecting your joints, and maintaining your independence.
